Everything you need to know about online CBT

Online CBT can support your long-term emotional health as well as helping you cope when something happens in your life. Speak directly with a therapist from the comfort of your home without the typical sign-up waiting time.

Helping you feel better, cope better and enjoy your life more

One in four people experience some form of emotional health problem during their life including low mood, feelings of stress and anxiety. Getting help can make a big difference quite quickly, enabling you to feel better day-to-day and live your life fully again.

Cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) is one type of help that many people find improves their quality of life. It's a form of psychological therapy that helps you spot how some of your thoughts affect your actions and feelings and teaches you about ways in which you can improve how you feel day-to-day.

A faster way to access online CBT

Therapy such as CBT is traditionally delivered face-to-face. With Ieso, therapy takes place online making it much easier to access, as well as less daunting and allows you to speak to your therapist at a time and place that suits you. Evidence shows that just as many people feel better after treatment with Ieso as through face-to-face treatment.

Treatment online is exactly the same as face-to-face treatment, other than that the conversation is typed on your computer. You're still in a one-to-one conversation with a fully qualified clinician. The only difference is that your conversation is entirely typed.

What kind of issues and problems can online CBT help with?

To date, we have treated over 50,000 NHS patients. CBT has been proven to be effective in improving a wide range of emotional health problems such as:

- Stress
- Depression
- Anxiety
- Fears and phobias
- Panic attacks
- Obsessive compulsive disorder (OCD)

CBT can support your long-term emotional health as well as helping you cope when something happens in your life, for example:

- Breaking up with your partner
- Losing your job
- Feeling overwhelmed after having a baby
- Being diagnosed with a health condition

Depending on your emotional health problem, you will either receive online CBT Skills or CBT, both with a qualified clinician for 45 minutes to an hour per session.

You might find online CBT helpful if you:

- would find it difficult to travel to a therapist each week
- can't easily go to appointments during a work day
- value taking time to reflect and think about how you answer questions
- enjoy chatting to friends and family on social media or messaging services
- like the idea of having a clinician's undivided attention, without the pressure of being in the same room
- would like to be able to go back and review the advice you received between sessions and after the treatment has ended for as long as you like

Don't be put off if you:

- are not a fast typer
- have never done anything like this before

Online CBT might not be for you if you:

- find it very difficult to express yourself in written format

What NHS patients say about online CBT

I feel so grateful that I heard about this service. It was so easy to access and fit around my commitments.

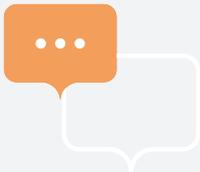

Online CBT worked so well for me and I really feel like a different person since completing the treatment.

I was unsure of what to expect at first but I felt really supported and it is a great, flexible way to get help with mental health

Completing this course of treatment was the best decision I have ever made. I have my life back on track. Thank you!
